

Governor's Hunter Women Convict Assignment Report 1798

Whilst researching for my forthcoming publication "Ladies of the Royal Admiral 1792" I came across - Governor Hunter's Assignment List. This being the Return of convict women in the services of Officers or other Households 1798 (AONSW ref:SZ767 pp.155 - 157, COD 197).

According to this document a Government Order was issued on 7 November 1798 requesting that "every Officer or other Housekeeper in the Colony who may have women servants in their Family" immediately forward the names of such as they employ in their respective Families.

There was no response from any Hawkesbury residents, which indicates that the resulting report is incomplete. Some convict women, for example, Martha Eaton (arr 1788), would have already served their time by 1798 but are still noted on the report, thus they were still consider convicts.

Fourteen of the eighty seven women were recorded as "wife of", whilst my research shows that twenty five were actually married to their employer and nine were in a defacto relationship at the time of the report.

Sarah Greggs is listed as Nurse to Lieutenant Lucas at Norfolk Island, when she was actually the mother of his three children. Was 'Nurse' used to disguise their true relationship.

Only one women seems to be recorded by her married name - Margaret Joiner nee Metcalfe who arrived on the Royal Admiral 1792.

I have included variations to the spelling of names found in numerous records and I have added corrections when my research has proved the information incorrect, for example Mary Parker, wife of George Small, has been corrected to John Small.

In some instances it has proven impossible to come to a final decision particularly in the case of common names: there were five Sarah Smith's in the colony in 1798 and after researching all five I am still unable to prove which one was a servant to Captain John Macarthur.

Women were not held in high regard in 1798 and convict women even less status. However they were pioneers who made the colony survive and expand thorough their own efforts and those of their children.
